THE WAIL OF SWAILS.

A First-Class Contribution to Radical Outrage Literature.

Swail's Story in Washington.

"Having been invited to address the Republican Club at White Oak, about seven miles from Kingstree, on Saturday the 5th inst., accordingly on the morning of the 5th, with Mr. A. J. Montgomery,

I proceeded to the place, arriving there about 11 o'clock. Shortly after arrival several persons of the Democratic party arrived from Kingstree, coming with the intention, as was shown, to disturb and break up the meeting. The club was called to order, and was called upon to address them.

At this point, a man named G. P.

Nelson, of Kingstree, came into the church. The president of the club informed him that he could not remain, as he was not a member, but he refused to leave. He then went out, and after being allowed to present but being refused to leave, he came back into the church. Mr. Montgomery was then speaking. Nelson was again told that he could not remain. He then went out, and after being allowed to present but being refused to leave, he came back into the church. Mr. Mon-gomery was then speaking. Nelson was again told that he could not remain.

He then went out, and after being allowed to present but being refused to leave, he came back into the church.

Mr. Montgomery was then speaking.

BILL LONGLEY OF TEXAS.

The End of the Most Atrocious Criminal in the Country.

The telegraph has already announced the execution at Giddings, Texas, on Wednesday, the 29th inst., of William

Longley, the murderer of William

Longley, a field hand, in March, 1875.

Upon reaching the gallows and after the completion of all the preliminary arrangements, during which Longley survived the scaffold and gave directions how to tie the rope, a high voice asked for Longley to know if they were going to cut his head off. He walked up the stairs with a light, mimic military tread, a smile upon his face and a lighted cigar in his mouth. For the steps might give way, when about half way up he stopped and laughingly said he didn't want "to be crippled."

After the sheriff read the death-warrant

Longley turned to his right and with his mouth open and eyes staring addressed the crowd, saying:

"Well, I haven't got much to say. I see a good many enemies around me, and I hope to see many more. I have many friends, too. I hope to see many more. I have many friends, too.

I hope to see many more. I have

many more. I have many friends, too.
